LSAT INSTRUCTORS NEEDED EXCELLENT PART-TIME INCOME

LSAT score:
90th percentile or higher

Estimated time commitment:
16 weekends per year

Estimated income:
$40,000 per year

Estimated hourly earnings:
$147 per hour

You worked hard to earn the high grades and top LSAT score required to get into a good law school. Why not put your hard earned credentials and test-taking expertise to work earning an excellent part-time income while you are in law school or while you are developing your law practice? You can earn $40,000 per year teaching eight LSAT seminars per year in your city. Each seminar is scheduled on a Saturday and Sunday and is held at a hotel conference center. Seminars are scheduled just prior to each LSAT test date. Teaching is fun and rewarding. You will likely enjoy sharing your knowledge regarding the law school admissions process and perhaps even a few tips about how to succeed in law school. Your audience of future law students will hang on your every word! Learn exactly how I began teaching LSAT classroom seminars while I was in law school and earned an excellent part-time income. For more information and for instructions regarding how to submit your email application, please visit our website.
